

Sponsorship Programme

Support a child through school – and change a life

Kibera slum, Nairobi, 6:30 a.m. First light, and children like Brian here pour out of their mud and corrugated iron shacks, step across rivers of sewerage and pick their way through the narrow alleys of the slum. Their stomachs are empty, but they are happy. They are on their way to Green Pastures School. In Mathare slum another group sets out for Tumaini School. The name means 'hope'.

These are the lucky ones. At school there is food, friendship and learning. The environment is fresh and clean. They have books, a library and computers. Here they aren't just slum kids; they are future leaders, thinkers, world changers.

They are there because they have a sponsor.

Outside the slum in secure boarding schools some of Kenya's brightest young minds are already in class. Without sponsorship, girls from the slums work as servants and risk rape, abuse and forced marriage. Boys who lose hope often turn to drugs or crime. But these boys want to be architects, doctors, engineers... and bring change to their country.
